OLD MEN IN CHOIRS IN ENGLAND'S CHURCHES

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] London, April 17.—Church choirs which have been disrupted during the war and conditions have found it necessary to requisition the veterans of the congregation. A large number of men at from 65 to 70 years of age have returned to their choirs, and in a few instances women choirs, wearing surplice, cassock and purple hat of uniform pattern, have been organized.

MANY GERMANS TAKE SWISS CITIZENSHIP

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Berne, Switzerland, April 17.—Of the 6,007 individuals who during the year 1916 sought to change their citizenship and become Swiss, the overwhelming majority were German. And of the 4,110 applications for naturalization that were granted by the Swiss officials, 3,335 were entered by Germans. The total creates a record. During the years before the war the average was little over a thousand annually.

SWEDISH TOBACCO MONOPOLY INCREASES COST OF 'PILL'

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Stockholm, Sweden, April 17.—The state tobacco monopoly has again increased the already high price of cigarettes. Cigarettes formerly costing 1 1/2 cents apiece about the cheapest cigarettes that even the non-particular smoker can endure—now cost 1 1/2 cents, and the increase of the dealer brands is considerably greater. Reasons given are the great increase in the price of raw materials and the great difficulties experienced in obtaining cigarette tobacco.

SWISS EMBROIDERY EXPORTS STOPPED BY SUBSEA WAR

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] St. Gall, Switzerland, April 17.—The submarine war and conditions preventing the retrogression during February, 1917, of the export of embroideries to the United States by about 75 per cent compared to those of February, 1916. The exports in that month aggregated 4,406,638 francs. This year they were only 1,260,436 francs, or a loss of 3,146,202 francs.

WANT VACANT LOTS FOR CITY GARDENS

APPEAL TO EVERY LAND OWNER THAT ALL LAND MAY BE USED FOR CULTIVATION OF GARDENS.

ALL LAND TO BE USED

A. B. West to Give Garden Lecture Next Saturday Evening at High School.—Conduct Information Bureau.

Personal appeal to the citizens of Janesville. A great need for service has come upon the country, and likewise our own community, and that is, the pressing need for utilizing every spot of vacant ground within the corporate limits for gardening purposes. During the coming year the necessity and demand for food stuffs will be greater than our ability to produce, and I make this appeal to the owners of vacant lots, or parts of lots, to use or allow them to be used for the cultivation of garden produce such as potatoes, beans, cabbage, etc., and to that end I would urge everyone to utilize his vacant lot, or allow someone else to do so. For that purpose I would ask every person who has a lot or piece of vacant land, to inform the city hall by telephone or otherwise, of any lot that he may have or control, and whether or not its use would be donated, and if not donated, to the use of the amount expected for the season's use. Please do this at once—telephone No. 169.

Aids. Every manufacturing industry could aid in this laudable enterprise by organizing their force and acquiring the use of vacant lots for cultivation. For instance, by offering a small prize for the best results along different lines of agriculture (which would be understood) already been done by one manufacturing institution.

Let us all, individually and collectively, lend a willing and helping hand to this most laudable enterprise; everything that we can produce for ourselves will leave that much more for the army and navy; also others in need.

The food problem is one of the great items in the struggle about to ensue and everyone must act as "one united fish unit" in producing every pound of food stuff that is possible through the tilling of those vacant and heretofore uncultivated lots or parcels of land in this community.

On Saturday evening of this week a meeting has been called to meet at the high school building at 7:30 p. m., when Prof. A. B. West, agriculturist, will deliver an instructive talk on gardening, where we will hear and how to arrange a successful garden, to be followed with an informal conference or "question test." All are cordially invited.

JAS. A. FATHERS, Mayor.

Janesville is called to the spade and the hoe. Every available plot of unoccupied land in the city is to be placed under cultivation as a protective measure against the starvation days sure to come. The proclamation issued by the mayor calls upon every citizen who owns land to respond to this request. The city must do its part in fighting the coming food shortage, and the city gardens were decided upon as the most effective way of counteracting the nation-wide shortage.

At a meeting of citizens held in the office of the mayor yesterday afternoon, a number of plans were brought up to facilitate the raising of crops by the city. The plan is to be lined up in the responses to the mayor's call, and it is felt there will be little difficulty in getting people to till the land. The Boy Scouts have offered their services to the mayor to cultivate small plots; a large number of citizens, who have heretofore never contemplated gardening as a serious project, are this year mapping out backyards and taking over planting in an earnest attempt to make the land work.

Officers of the Janesville Machine company organized a garden club among their employees, offering prizes for the best yields and neatest gardens. Over one hundred and fifty families have been interested in this movement through that one factory, and there are still more who contemplate gardens provided they can secure the land. J. A. Craig is now working on a campaign to arouse a similar interest among the employees of every large manufacturing concern in the city.

Mr. West to Lecture. As an aid to the city gardeners, Professor Allen B. West of the agricultural department at the local high school, has volunteered to give a lecture on city gardens in the auditorium of the high school next Saturday evening at half past seven. At this time, Mr. West will outline general methods to be followed in the successful cultivation of a small garden, and will be ready to answer any questions regarding particular cases that people may wish to bring up.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Unsettled weather tonight and Wednesday. Probably showers. Somewhat warmer tonight in east portion.

IF NOT WHY NOT?

If you have not actually started a garden at your home, then why not? Do you not realize that this is a year when every individual must do his or her part toward national economy? Have you failed to appreciate that the high cost of living has soared with above the heads, out of reach of the average man working on a salary?

Everyone must enlist for the "war," be it for actual fighting, or for the conservation of life behind the firing line. Just as important work can be done in the various communities, on the farms and in the gardens as will be accomplished by the young men called upon to join the colors and fight for their country. This is not a nation of slackers; it is a country of workers.

The men who work in the office, the store or the shop, can all play an active part in this production problem by augmenting the food supply by their own individual efforts. Tilling a small plot of land and planting it with food, either for immediate consumption or for saving for the coming winter, green vegetables, fresh from the garden, will do much to make up for the lack of other foods, the prices of which are almost prohibitive.

It is not but a generation or two ago when the little plot of land about the home was tilled as garden. Now it is lawn. In the summer the supply of vegetables, a part, at least, of the winter's supply; it had its potato and corn patches and our grandfathers and fathers lived and enjoyed life. Today more money is actually wasted on incidentals that the average family have become accustomed to, than is spent on food of real nutritious value.

We must stretch along every line. Not that the United States will have to suffer the privations that have come to Germany and Austria, to England and France, all practically cut off from supplies of food from foreign nations and forced to depend upon their own resources, but we must not only supply ourselves but have a surplus to aid others.

This war is not going to last forever, and when it ends, when peace comes and the embargo is raised on shipments of food to Germany and Austria, Central powers, the United States must be prepared to furnish them and add these people to the list of nations that adjust themselves to conditions and raise their own crops. We are now waging an agricultural war with possibilities for the future.

If, as a nation, we can save a part of our production, store it away, as they did in Egypt, for the seven years of famine, it will mean the saving of millions of lives. More than have been killed in the war, perhaps, for it will be the women and children who must suffer most as they always do.

Let each man do their own individual part. If they have ground they can not use for garden purposes, vacant lots suitable for garden plots, let them offer it free of rental to those who have not available space and who must increase our home supply. There are plenty of places where small crops can be raised and every crop thus harvested is really money as though deposited in the bank.

If you have not planted a garden yet, why not?

THE PATRIOT.

It is not always the man who enlists for actual war service that is the true patriot. The man who hastens to the enlistment office and records his name for actual service is lauded and—justly so—for his patriotism, but grasp and think of the young man who is just as enthusiastic and also seeks to enlist and is turned down for some physical defect that perhaps he never knew he had. He, also, is a patriot. His work is not with the trenches, or on the firing line, or at drill, but in the line of industry that he is best adapted for taking the place of some man who can go, whom the government will accept.

The man who has a wife and family to support, who has an aged mother or sisters or brothers to look after, must continue to place at his disposal, in the shop, store or office, or in the field, He is a patriot. He is doing a man's work. He is demonstrating that he is not a slacker and the community honors him and his fellow workers as they do the soldier who marches under the glare of the trumpet and drum. The man who with a sore heart who sorrows over the fact that his nation is at war with the country of his birth, the land of his fathers, can do his share as well behind the firing line as with the armed force by actual labor in lines—perhaps not warlike—but just as essential, providing the necessities of life for those left behind who otherwise might suffer.

Patriotism can be displayed in many ways and by various means. The man with money can give of surplus, the worker of his labor and the soldier of his time. Those who are left behind need not feel discouraged; their time will come; their work is laid out for them and they can perhaps accomplish more real, genuine work by being at the present time, than by actually enlisting for strife, if need be.

RUSHING WORK.

The state legislature has evidenced a desire to finish their work and adjourn by the middle of May. They have the consent of the taxpayers at least. They may be called into extra session before the term of the present members expire and this will mean additional expenses, so why not adjourn further at the present time? These sessions of the state lawmakers always cause a lot of uneasiness in the hearts of the average citizen and some of the useless debates show that the members do not appreciate the real importance of the office they hold. However, thus far the present legislature has really done some constructive work and they will do more before they adjourn if they can bottle up some of the wind bags meanwhile.

Beauty spots are essential to every city. When William Penn, the Quaker, came to America, he laid out the city of Philadelphia, the first of the lines of the old world cities, particularly London, named his streets, Market, Arch, Race and Vine, to the north, and Chestnut, Locust, Spruce, and Pine to the south, he also made plans for public squares every four blocks, squares where giant trees today grow, the breathing places of thousands. If Penn, some three hundred years ago—almost—saw the wisdom of this, why object to a park along the Rock river between Milwaukee and Court street, in a community that is supposed to be up-to-date and moving?

One way to stop this beef shortage is to pass a law prohibiting the sale of any female calf under the age of six months for slaughter. When six months have passed the calf in question is a heifer and is suitable for beef purposes. Still better, it may have developed sufficiently to assure the owner it is liable to become a good milk cow and thus increase our milk supply.

If Janesville can obtain a permanent camp of troops stationed here for training it would mean a big thing for the men so stationed and the community at large. There is no city in the state that can offer the facilities that Janesville has as regards sanitation, railway connection and civic improvement, go where you may. It is worth consideration by the federal government.

This late spring is giving some of the pessimists an opportunity to bear on the theory that this war is all wrong and we are going to the eternal bow wows and point to the ash heaps and the high price of coal, the wet weather in prospect, and never see the sunshine of the golden June days or the hot weather of July and August.

Already the first wild flowers have appeared and soon there will be many "lovers of nature" who will wander forth, pull up the roots, the tender plants, simply for the blossoms, and kill the growth of future years. Why not be temperate and look to the future?

Autoists will now begin to complain of the condition of the roads and talk of highway improvement. To those who walk and during the winter tramped through snow on the sidewalks of many of these good road advocates this sounds funny doctrine.

Congressman Leavort of this state is one of the marked men down at Washington these days. Unfortunately one of our senatorial members and several others of our congressional delegation are under a cloud that reflects upon the state as well as the individuals.

Wheat acreage continues to increase in numbers and consequently Rock county is doing its share. The good work must keep up though along other lines before we are out of the woods.

Edgerton News

Edgerton, April 17.—The ladies of the City Federation entertained their gentlemen friends last evening at the library hall and a large audience was present to enjoy the entertainment. The program was opened by the high school orchestra. The president, Mrs. A. Anderson, then gave a short address, followed by the address of welcome in original verse by Miss Madge Willson. This was responded to by Mrs. A. T. Shearer, who used as her subject, "The Man." The next on the program was the address of the evening given by Miss Lottie Stearns of Milwaukee. She used as her subject "The Ideal Democracy." It was a very forceful address and enjoyed by the audience. Our visiting nurse next responded and talked upon her work in the city. The high school orchestra then gave several selections, after which light refreshments were served. The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion with the national colors and a very pleasant evening is reported by all present.

It is probable that a platoon will be enlisted in the city as quite a number have expressed a desire to enlist in the Wisconsin National Guard. Captain J. N. Caldwell of the Janesville company has obtained authority from Adjutant General Salmon of Madison to organize a platoon of 33 men in the city. This is done to give the Edgerton men a chance to enlist in a body, thereby affording the advantage of same company. Captain Caldwell has the reputation of being one of the most competent officers in the Wisconsin National Guard, and Edgerton young men who wish to enlist should consider themselves fortunate in being able to enlist under such an efficient officer.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church will give a cafeteria supper in the church parlors tomorrow evening.

Elmer Dixon of Albany, called on his sister, Miss Carrie Dixon yesterday. He has enlisted in the Wisconsin cavalry.

Bids for the proposed street work were opened last evening at the council meeting and the contract for the paving to be done was awarded to the East Stone Construction company of Eau Claire. The price of the contract was $1.50 per yard and embraces the paving to be done on North and South Main streets, Rollin street, Fulton street and Catlin street. The East Stone Construction company are the contractors that had the paving in charge last season.

Mr. and Mrs. Rinold, who reside east of the city on the Clarke farm, are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby girl.

Ralph Pederson was a Stoughton visitor yesterday, calling at his parental home in that city.

D. P. Devine accompanied John Burns to Madison yesterday, where the latter secured his final naturalization papers.

Every patriotic citizen should display the stars and stripes from his home and his place of business Thursday, Loyalty Day. The committees in charge are arranging for decorations on all the principal streets in the city and the citizens are asked to co-operate with the committee to the fullest extent.

Whitney Martin was a business caller at Madison today.

Arthur Wileman has been appointed temporary mail carrier on the new rural route out of the city. A civil service examination for the position will be held at a later date.

H. H. Dickenson was a Janesville business caller yesterday.

Miss Genevieve Holcomb returned to La Crosse yesterday after a visit at the home of her mother in the city.

SMALL GERMAN COINS MYSTERIOUSLY LOST

Berne, April 17.—German papers report a vexatious and almost mysterious disappearance of small coins, making it constantly necessary to issue new provisional iron money which must be "cash in" after the war.

The government, since 1916, has coined and issued 10,503,000 marks worth of silver 50 pfennig pieces, most of which have disappeared from sight almost as fast as put out. In addition it has put out 116,000,000 10 pfennig pieces and about as many 5 pfennig pieces made of iron, and even these are disappearing. Business firms are known to have in some cases as much as 70,000 marks worth of iron money.

The situation is to be relieved, it is reported, by a new issue of "bons" for 50 pfennig pieces, which will be put out by individual municipalities and taken up after the war.

The shortage of small money, and its retirement from circulation and into countless stockings, has been under way for more than two years. It began originally in the occupied portions of France, then spread to similar districts in Russia. Its first result was the issue of municipal paper money all over Northern France, and the issue of military orders forbidding the natives to accept either French or German money but to accept only town "bons."

KING GEORGE APPROVES FOREIGN TONGUE STUDY

London, April 17.—When King George opened a school for the study of oriental languages here the other day he placed official stamp of approval on the revival of a movement that since the war has been gaining rapid headway in this country to study foreign languages. The school opened by the king is the first of its kind in the British Empire which counts 320,000,000 citizens speaking oriental languages.

One of the lessons taught this country by the war has been the need for a wider knowledge of foreign languages. The British people have learned through the war that the average German knew more languages than the average Briton.

ITALIANS POSTPONE DUELS UNTIL AFTER THE WAR

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Rome, April 17.—In the Italian army, where the duel is obligatory for officers and non-commissioned officers, it has been decided by decree for an officer to postpone until after the war his decision to seek revenge. All duels are to be put off to the end of the war, and then the dispute may be referred, without loss of honor, to the general commanding.

CLAIM JAP BURGLAR KILLED GERMAN LADY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Tokio, April 17.—Japanese authorities assert that there is no evidence that the recent murder of Mrs. Irma von Saldern, daughter of Vice Admiral Eduard von Capelle, the German Minister of Navy, was an act of vengeance upon the German naval chief, and that the murder was committed undoubtedly by a Japanese burglar. The fact that the crime occurred at a time when Germany's unrestricted submarine warfare was holding world interest, the authorities declare, was merely a coincidence. Nevertheless, the tragedy is widely discussed in diplomatic circles.

Irma von Saldern was a beautiful woman of twenty-eight years who passed her time in seclusion near the German prisoners' camp at Fukuoka, the southernmost island of Kyushu. Her husband, Captain Siegfried von Saldern, was one of the most prominent German officers taken prisoner by the Japanese at the surrender of the German fortress at Tsingtau.

Von Saldern was a member of a well known German family with a seat at Dessau and his marriage with the daughter of the German Minister was a happy one. In China, Captain von Saldern was an intimate friend of Governor von Weddel, the commander of Tatsien-tsun fortress. After the capitulation Mrs. von Saldern, with her two children, followed her husband to Japan and rented a fashionable Japanese house near the compound in which her husband was an officer-prisoner.

There she lived quietly, rarely leaving her children except to visit her husband and some of his officer friends during their illness. A few weeks ago she suggested that she leave Japan with one of her boys, to further his education and try to return to Germany. Her husband urged her to remain. She consented.

One morning, when a domestic entered, she found her mistress stretched upon the floor of a bedroom. Life about her neck showed that she had been strangled to death. The police reconstructed the crime in this way: The assassin entered armed with a poignard or short sword and stabbed her. When she became unconscious or helpless, he cut the electric wire with a cord which connected the lamp with a wall figure and making a noose, choked the woman to death. There were evidences that burglary was committed.

The next act of the tragedy came three days later, twenty-four hours after the funeral of Mrs. von Saldern. Captain von Saldern was inconsolable. The fact that he had urged his wife to remain preyed upon his mind, and apparently he did not forgive himself. About the hour of his wife's murder, he detached from the wall of his house an electric cord similar to that with which she was strangled, fixed it to the chandelier in his salon and committed suicide by hanging.

The press maintains silence concerning the tragedy. The police are making every effort to discover the murderer.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, April 17, 1877.—A house on wheels was the principal attraction on Franklin street today.

Burr Robbins is utilizing the old post office room, by storing his stock of show paper therein.

To some families there is no book so indispensable as a patent medicine teacher. To them it is a great almanac.

The other day a girl of fifteen summers called at a bookstore and wanted an almanac that told what kind of weather we are going to have. This was surpassed yesterday by an urchin who called at Stearns' for an almanac which told all about the Bible.

A Beloit man came to Janesville a day or two ago, got drunk and insulted a lady. The marshal took him in hand and led him before Justice Patten who sentenced him to one day's confinement in the jail and to pay the fine of $5 and costs all of which amounted to $12. He at first refused to pay the fine and costs and suffer imprisonment too, and wanted to compromise, by paying the fine only and then go on his way rejoicing. It is not yet settled whether he will stay in jail thirty days, or conform to the sentence of the court.

FOOTVILLE

Footville, April 16.—About sixty neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Selck gave them a surprise on Saturday night, coming uninvited to help them celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. Light refreshments were served and a general good time was enjoyed by all. A pleasing feature of the evening was the singing of a patriotic song by the two sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hutton. He, however, lived long enough after the shooting, to give them the address of his brother, Tom, who lives east of Janesville, and to tell something of the tragic event which was the effect that as he was walking to and fro on the platform at the depot waiting for the train, two colored women came up to him and robbed him of money and other valuables and then as he called for help a negro shot him. A telegram was sent at once to his brother, Tom, who left on the next train. After receiving the message, for St. Louis where the tragedy occurred, and where the remains were buried. which will be seen at the Myers theatre for one night only, Tuesday, April 24th, William Hodge was inspired by the belief that some measure of the illusion of the average auditor is destroyed through the knowledge that the character portrayed by a star as well as those surrounding him in a drama have been created by himself.

It was to hold intact the full quota of enjoyment for his audiences both in "The Road to Happiness," in which he was last seen in Chicago, and again in "Fixing Sister," that the distinguished exponent of American character types unselfishly foregoes the added fame of authorship, and we are reminded that the drama is by no means the only mode of his expression in this line for Mr. Hodge has to his credit two novels entitled "The Guest of Honor" and "Eighteen Miles From Home."

A POPULAR MAN GREETED BY A LARGE CROWD
HAS PACKED HOUSE

Daly's Entertainment and Lectures Draw Crowds to the Skating Rink.

CONCERT EVERY NIGHT
Harry E. Daly, the Tonal Man, traveler, lecturer, advertiser and philanthropist, who created such a furor in the large cities of the country, last night gave his first lecture and demonstration to the people of Janesville. The entertainment was a big success. The music and singing pleased the crowd, as one could tell by the expressions on their faces.

The crowd represented Janesville's best citizens and presented several different strata of humanity. The merchant, the working man and their families, the shop girl, all mingled together and enjoyed an evening of merriment and pleasure. The concert is held in the Skating Rink. The lecture by the Tonal man is a remarkable example of his oratorical power. Daly has the looks of a man who has done many things and accomplished much along the line of his life's work. When he talks he speaks conviction into the heart of his hearers. In an interview, Daly expressed his warm appreciation of the manner in which he has been received in this city. "I have been kept busy every minute I have been here. All day long many people called at my headquarters to see about the new medical remedy. I have demonstrated the Tonal remedies in the extreme western cities and I have wondered if the people here in the east were effected with the same illness of mankind to the same extent as those who inhabit the western states. But I am convinced beyond doubt that humanity is the same; subject to the same ills—to the common enemy, disease. My theory is readily accepted by thinking people because it is simple, remarkable and sound. I maintain that the stomach is the supreme organ of the body, controlling the life-giving fluids and therefore responsible for either the health or disease. It naturally follows that if the stomach is restored to normal conditions, good health cannot fail to follow. The new discovery will do this, and before I am here one week cure will substantiate my claim. Every evening the deaf and paralytic are invited to come up on the stage and test the healing power of the new discovery, Tonal preparation. Every day from 10 to 12 in the morning 2 to 4 in the afternoon, the Tonal man is kept busy at his headquarters at the People's Drug Store, attending to the many calls. Tonal remedies are for sale at the People's Drug store. Advertisement.

CLAIM MYSTERY AEROPLANE IS SEEN OVER MONROE

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Monroe, Wis., April 17.—Following close on the heels of the disappearance of Alvin Cunsap from the city after he had talked too freely "over his cups" and made threats that he would blow up the armory, has come the report that a mysterious aeroplane has been seen passing over this city at night.

John H. Thomas, a well known resident of the city, declares that Sunday night his attention was attracted by the whirring of the motor as it passed over near his home. His story is vouched for by a number of his neighbors whom he summoned, all of whom assert they observed the moving lights on the aircraft for some time. The object of the aircraft visit is a mystery.

Heart and Home Problems

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: A couple of years ago I became acquainted with a nice boy in school who seemed to like me. I liked him too. We always helped each other with our lessons and had real nice times together. He knew my people and I knew his, and so there was no talk about one night he came home with me and we stayed until it was time for him to go home. He asked to kiss me. I refused, and he made some joking remark so that he wouldn't be hurt. After that things went on the way they did before. He never even told me he liked me very much when he asked to kiss me. For a minute I couldn't hear him for asking for such a thing. Only thought of him as a lover. How can I tell if this was an insult or not? When I see him now he is always the same old schoolmate. He is not as good as he was. That night was the first and last time he said anything that I didn't like.

You said that a boy doesn't respect a girl when he asks for a kiss. When I gave him no encouragement, I don't see how it is my fault. I wish I did know a little more about how to handle a boy like that. I would like to know what to think without troubling anyone. I can't ask my mother, because I suppose she wouldn't like it at all. I don't suppose I would have to tell her. I don't want to have her think bad things about him even if he did say that way. She doesn't know about the good things he does and perhaps she is sorry for by this time. Any way I hope he is. DOUBTFUL.

My dear little girl, when the boy lication to relieve an unpleasant odor from under the arms? (B. R. G.)

Answer: Powdered alum ..... 1 ounce

Wash and rinse rice (if possible) through several changes of water; boil, then drain. Dilute curry powder, combine with white sauce, add more salt if necessary, and pour over drained rice. Serve with veal or mutton.

Fortified Oranges. Mix candied cherries, broken nut meats and crushed macaroons with sweetened and flavored whipped cream. Allow one orange for each person. Cut slice off top of orange and remove pulp and juice without breaking shell. Cut square holes in sides and insert pieces of stick, candy, to represent guns. Fill with the killed whip cream mixture and top with little stiff flags. Very appropriate for Memorial Day.

Scrambled Eggs With Salt Pork. Cut fat salt pork in small dice, put in skillet, fry until brown and crisp. Drain off all grease. Pour over meat eggs to which have been added one tablespoon milk to each egg; pepper to taste (not say). Cook stirring constantly until set. Allow one generous slice of meat, one or one and one-half eggs, to a person.

Egg Toast. For this dish a rather stale loaf of bread will be required. Slice bread about half-inch thick. Dip each slice into a custard made with two eggs, two cups milk, and a little salt. Put into a frying pan which has one tablespoon of butter and two of lard melted together. Fry slices of bread, remove to hot platter and serve with jelly.

Ten "Dosaan don'ts."

"Why are so many of us below par?" I asked a doctor the other day, after vainly trying to think of a thoroughly healthy person of my acquaintance.

"Because," he said, "if you will pardon the quotation 'they have done all the things they ought not to have done and left undone all the things they ought to have done!'"

"For instance," he echoed. "Well, let me see. I'll give you ten for instances."

"And this is what they were."

"The average person," said the doctor.

"Doesn't drink water enough."

"Isn't outdoors enough."

"Isn't careful enough about keeping his bowels regular."

"Doesn't chew his food enough."

"Doesn't eat enough coarse food."

"Doesn't sleep enough."

"Doesn't laugh enough."

"Hurries too much."

"Eats too much candy and cake."

"At the wrong time, that is when the stomach is empty and the appetite for the next meal will be spoiled."

"Are these enough for instances?" finished the doctor.

"Quite," I said, "and yet, when you stop to think of it, they are all simple things to do. Nothing hard about them like dieting or taking a cold bath or special exercises."

"Exactly," said the doctor, "and let me ask you something—what makes us commit the foolish offenses we do against our health? What makes a girl eat a box of chocolates in the middle of the afternoon?"

"Why," said I, "because she likes the taste of them, I suppose."

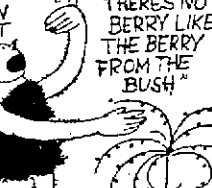

"Precisely," said the doctor, "a great many of the offenses we commit against our bodies are simply figure it out, is there any sensation to compare with that of feeling perfectly fit? Think of some morning when you got up feeling perfectly fine. Wasn't that a more glorious sensation than you could get out of eating a box of chocolates?"

"Yes," said I, "because you feel like that, a pleasure, isn't it? Then why isn't it worth while to sacrifice some minor pleasures to feel like that?"

"And in the light of the doctor's analysis, 'worthwhile' seemed all too mild a word."

GINGLES' JINGLES

OUR STAND.

It may be we're four-fushing mostly, but feel that we're now on the square; we may not have always been just as we should—may not have been playing it fair; but that is no reason why things should not change, no argument favoring wrong, the fact we have found that it pays to do right, just makes us for clean stuff more strong. Our sons and our daughters we love and respect, we're anxious their course should be straight, and that is the reason we stand as we do—why things that have wronged us we hate. We know from experience bought at a price, temptation is right on the job; we know what it promises, what it has done, we know that its aim is to rob. The course we have run and the fights we have fought, and the anguish and grief we have stood, has made us come through strong and firm for the right, the rough stuff must beat it. Link X Jingles for good.

Eleanor Tries to Explain the Unhappy Bracelet Incident to Her Husband.

Eleanor and Douglas left the club rooms early. They had studiously kept apart since the incident of the bracelet; the bracelet between them had dropped on the floor between them when Mr. Corey had tried to slip the box in her hand.

"What could that be about?" Eleanor thought about the thought that she had read his expression on his face. He had stood a little distance from him in the room, but there was a hard expression on his face. He had stood a little distance from him in the room, but there was a hard expression on his face. He had stood a little distance from him in the room, but there was a hard expression on his face.

The cool night air felt grateful to her hot face as they walked along in silence. Several times she had tried to open the conversation, but met with such a chilling silence that she was driven back into her troubled thoughts. When the latch key swung open the vestibule door she entered, laying her hand on his shoulder, saying, "I must tell you about it, Douglas," but he looked about him and replied:

"Tell me nothing you do not wish to; it is unnecessary," and he passed her, not noticing the detaining hands. He took a look at the watch and then went up the stairs and she heard the door of their room close with a defiant little bang. She removed her wraps and, turning back, she saw Douglas standing in the living room, his face into a chair and buried her face on her hands.

What had happened? Was Douglas angry with her—her Douglas? Did he think—

A shiver ran through her frame. Douglas must not be allowed to go to bed and not know. She hurried up her belongings and hurried into their room. The light was out and when she snapped it on she saw Douglas lying in bed with his eyes closed. He could not be asleep in so

THE CAUSE OF CHILLS.

A chill is a sudden sensation of great coldness, accompanied by more or less shivering, clattering and trembling, blueness or pallor of the face, and, very often, by a marked elevation of body temperature above the normal 98 or 99 F.

In the days of blizzards—which was the case in the winter of 1916—a chill was due to exposure and that it was the clearest evidence that the victim was "taking cold." When pneumonia happened to follow hard on the chill, it was often the case that the chill was the cause of the lung trouble. It was an effect, a symptom of infection, and not a cause of the invasion of the blood by the malarial parasites, and not a cause of the invasion of the blood by the malarial parasites, and not a cause of the invasion of the blood by the malarial parasites.

When drainage and natural healing, with chilliness or a chill, develop, it is the presence of a slight wound, it is the time to throw the sponge in the ash can and summon the doctor. When simple folk speak of "taking cold," it is impossible to "take cold" in a wound, but very easy to plant the germs of blood poisoning in it.

In general, a chill may be treated by a hot mustard foot bath in bed or by a full hot bath in the tub, after which the patient should be tucked in bed with hot bottles aplenty. Some very hot coffee is good.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Just What a Rupture Is.

Will you kindly explain just what a hernia or rupture consists of, and whether there is any effective remedy other than surgery?

Answer:—It is an unnatural bulging of some structure from within the abdominal wall. In babies the usual situation is at the navel. In babies such a rupture commonly heals or disappears spontaneously. If it is supported by a band or belt or adhesive straps. In adults the usual situation is the bend of the groin. In adults there is no means of enclosing a cure other than surgery, and as a rupture may become strangulated at any time, that is, the portion of bowel or other structure protruding may have its circulation shut off and become gangrenous, with fatal outcome, it is always wise to undergo the comparatively safe operation for radical cure. It is economical to do so, because the cost is far less than the cost of the many days' disability from the rupture, physical inefficiency, and eternal expense for new trusses.

A ROMANCE OF THE LEWIS AND CLARK
EXPEDITION

By Emerson Hough,
Author of "The Mississippi
Bubble," "Fifty-Four
Forty or Fight,"
Etc.

Copyright, 1916, by Emerson
Hough.

"But as to the Mississippi valley, matters are entirely different. There is no law against that country's organizing for a better government. As these states on the east confederated in the cause against oppression, so can those yonder. There will be more opportunity for strong men there when that game is on the board—men like Captain Lewis, for instance. Shouldn't one's self with a foredoomed failure? Not at all. I prefer rather success—action, mark, power, money for myself, if you please. With us—million dollars for the founding of our new country. With him—for the undertaking of yonder impracticable and chimerical expedition, twenty-five hundred dollars! Which enterprise, think you, will win?"

"But, on the other hand, if that expedition of Mr. Jefferson's should succeed by virtue of accident or of good leadership, all my plans must fall—this is plain. It comes, therefore, to this, Theo, and I may tell you plainly—Captain Lewis must be seen—he must be stopped—we must hold a conference with him. It would be useless for me to undertake to arrange all that. There is only one person who can save your father's future, and that one, my daughter, is—you!"

He caught Theodosia's look of surprise, her start, the swift flush on her cheek, and laughed lightly.

"Let me explain. Aaron Burr and all his family, all his friends, will reach swift advancement in yonder new government. Power, place—these are the things that strong men covet. I plan for myself some greater office than second scribe in this tawdry republic along the Atlantic. I want the first place and in a greater field. I will take my friends with me. I want men who can lead other men. I want men like Captain Lewis."

"It seems that you value him more now than once you did."

"Yes, that is true. Theo; that is true. I did not favor his suit for your hand at that time. Although he had a modest fortune in Virginia lands, he could not offer you the future assured by Mr. Alston. I was rejoiced—I admit it frankly—when I learned that young Captain Lewis came just too late, for I feared you would have preferred him. And yet I saw his quality then. Mr. Jefferson sees it. He is a good chooser of men. But Captain Lewis must not advance beyond the Ohio. That is a large task for a woman."

"What woman, father?"

A flush came to her pale cheek. Her father turned to her directly, his own piercing gaze aflame.

"There is but one woman on earth could do that, my daughter! That young man's fate was settled when he looked on that woman—when he looked on you."

She swiftly turned her head aside, not answering.

"Am I so engaged in affairs that I cannot see the obvious, my dear? went on the vibrant voice. "Had I no eyes for what went on at my side this very evening at Mr. Jefferson's dinner table? Could I fail to observe his look to you—and, yes, am I not sensible to what your eyes said to him in reply?"

"Do you believe that of me—and you my father?"

"I believe nothing dishonorable of you, my dear," said Burr. "Neither could I ask anything dishonorable. But I know what young blood will do. Your eyes said no more than that for me. I know you wish him well—know you wish well for his ambition, his success—am sure you do not wish to see him doomed to failure. What—would you see his career blighted when it should be but begun?"

"There would be prospects for him?"

"All the prospects in the world! I would place him only second to myself, so highly do I value his talents in an enterprise such as this. Alston's money, but Lewis' brains and courage! They both love you. Do I not know?"

Troubled, again she turned her gaze aside.

"Listen, my daughter. That young man is wise. He has no such vast belief in yonder expedition. He is going in desperation, to escape a memory! Is it not true? Tell me—and believe that I am not blind—is not Captain Lewis going into the Missouri country in order to forget a certain woman?"

Still her downcast eye gave him no reply.

"Meriwether Lewis yonder among the savages is a failure. Meriwether Lewis with me is second only to the vicegerent of the lower Louisiana country. Texas, Florida, much of Mexico, will join hands with us, that is sure. We fight with the great nations of the world, not against them—we fight with the stars in their courses and not against them."

"Now, you have two pictures, my dear—one of Meriwether Lewis, the wanderer, a broken and hopeless man, living among the savages, a log hut his home, a campfire the only home he knows. Picture that hopeless and broken man—condemned to that by yourself, my dear—and then picture that other figure whom you can see rescued, restored to the world, placed know, but one way. I go not as Theodosia Burr, but as Mrs. Alston of Carolina. I am a woman of honor; he is a man of honor. No argument on earth would avail with him except such as might be based upon honor and loyalty. Nor would any argument, even if offered by my father, avail otherwise with me."

She turned upon him now the full gaze of her dark eyes, serious, luminous, yet tender, her love for him showing so clearly that he came to her softly, took her hands, caught her by his bosom and kissed her tenderly on the cheek.

"Theodosia," said he, "aid me. If the fire of my ambition has consumed me I have come to you because I know your love, because I know your loyalty. I have not slept tonight," he added, passing a hand across his forehead wearily.

"There will be no more sleep for me tonight," was her reply.

"You will see him in the morning?"

"Yes."

CHAPTER IX.
The Parting.

THERE were others in Washington who did not sleep that night. A light burned until sunrise in the little office room of Thomas Jefferson. Spread upon his desk, covering its litter of unfinished business, lay a large map—a map which today would cause any schoolboy to smile, but which at that time represented the wisdom of the great North American continent. It had served to afford anxious study for two men these many hours.

"Tonder it lies, Captain Lewis!" said Mr. Jefferson at length. "How vast, how little known! We know our climate and soil here. It is but reasonable to suppose that they exist yonder as they do with us, in some part at least. If so, yonder are homes for millions now unborn. And General Bonaparte knows the value of that land he would have fought the world rather than alienate such a region."

The president tapped a long forefinger on the map.

"This, then," he went on, "is your country. Find it out—bring back to me examples of its soil, its products, its vegetable and animal life. Espy out especially for us any strange animals there may be of which science has not yet account. I hold it probable that there may be yonder living examples of the mastodon, whose bones we have found in Kentucky. You yourself may see those enormous creatures yet alive."

Meriwether Lewis listened in silence. Mr. Jefferson turned to another branch of his theme.

"I fancy that some time there will be a canal built across the isthmus that binds this continent to the one below—a canal which shall connect the two great oceans. But that is far in the future. It is for you to spy out the way now across the country itself. Explore it—discover it—it is our new world."

"A few must think for the many," he went on. "I had to smuggle this appropriation through congress—$2,500—the price of a poor Virginia farm! I have tampered with the constitution itself in order to make this purchase of a country not included in our original territorial lines. I have taken my own chances—just as you must take yours now. The finger of God will be your guide and your protector. Are you ready, Captain Lewis? It is late."

Indeed, the sun was rising over Washington; the mists of morning were reeking along the banks of the Potomac.

"I can start in half an hour," replied Meriwether Lewis.

"Are your men ready, your supplies gathered together?"

"The rendezvous is at Harpers Ferry, up the river. The wagons with the supplies are ready there. I will take boat from here myself with a few of the men. Not later than tomorrow afternoon I promise that we will be on our way. We burn the bridges behind us and cross none until we come to them."

"Spoken like a soldier! It is in your hands. Go then."

There was one look, one hand clasp. The two men parted. Nor did they meet again for years.

The sun still was young when Meriwether Lewis at length descended the steps of the executive mansion.

Social Tact.

Mrs. Green—You spoke just now of social tact. Precisely what do you mean? Mrs. Wyse—By social tact I mean getting familiar with all sorts of people without letting them get familiar with you.—Boston Transcript.

Dinner Stories

"I grovel here before you in the dust," observed the impassioned youth, as he sank onto the drawing-room floor.

"I don't know what you mean by this," replied she, coldly. "I look after this room most carefully myself every morning."

A man with the croup halted a doctor on a quiet street corner.

"Doctor," he said, coughing violently, "what ought a chap to do when he's got the croup?"

The doctor's eye emitted a steely light at the thought of being lunched out of a free prescription, and he said:

"Such a man, my friend, ought to consult a good physician."

"Thanks, doctor," said the sufferer, as he took his leave. "That's what I'll do, then."

"Come back here!" yelled Mrs. O'Brien. "Come back here and explain this."

"Explain what?" asked Mr. O'Brien, with a look of innocence.

"Explain why you are twenty cents short in your pay this week," demanded Mrs. O'Brien.

"Oh, yes," explained Mr. O'Brien, as he edged toward the door. "I almost forgot to tell you. The boiler exploded when I was in the engine-room this morning and the foreman docked me for the time I was up in the air."

Mrs. Dubwaite has been under a great nervous strain for about six months.

"That's too bad. What's troubling her?"

"Some people moved in next door who are evidently well-to-do, but to save her life she can't find out where they get their money."

RUSSIANS SAVING MORE
SINCE STRIFE BEGAN

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Petrograd, April 17.—Bank deposits in Russia have greatly increased since the beginning of the war. January 1, 1914, they aggregated 3,218,000,000 rubles; January 1, 1916, 4,342,000,000 rubles. The increase during 1916 was especially notable. The total amounting to more than 7,000,000,000 rubles.

The increase is ascribed to the fact that the business world is waiting for more favorable conditions to enter upon new enterprises. It is anticipated that there will be an enormous outflow of money from the banks into such enterprises as soon as the war ends.

ENGLAND TO SEEK TRADE IN SOUTH AMERICA

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Liverpool, April 17.—The Liverpool Chamber of Commerce has decided to form a special new South American section, to further local interests in the trade of the Latin-American Republics. Trade in that quarter of the world will be much sought after when the war ceases and, as Liverpool merchants are already interested to some extent, it is considered advisable to lay plans for the extension of their interests.
